GENERAL NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE [illegible]]

There is still [illegible] storm in the region about Marysville Saturday night [illegible] sluiced out most of the poles of the Western Union company for several miles [illegible] it was seen that several days would be required [illegible] The company however has made arrangements for the use of the railroad wire south of Redding, which is still working and will be able to transact its usual commercial business at least. The Oregonian of course more than any other single interest suffers from the interruption so frequent this winter. Its management has spared no effort in overcoming the difficulties of the situation and has only failed to present full news reports where it was absolutely impossible to do so. The dispatches in this issue, dates of the 28th, were forwarded by our telegraphic agency to Redding in California north of the break in the wires and from there telegraphed. This will be continued so long as the present interruption lasts.

Another Northern Explorer Thinks the Jeannette Safe.

NEW YORK, Jan 28—A reporter of the Tribune interviewed Captain Howgate respecting the proposed relief to be sent to the Jeannette. He said In my opinion there is no need for anxiety for the safety of the vessel. We know that she was properly fitted out with everything including sleds and dogs and if she has been caught in an ice floe and crushed those on board would undoubtedly have had time to secure the ice to the mainland and thence to [illegible] and St Petersburg whence we should hear by telegraph of their arrival. You cannot call this case and the one of the two whalers that were lost parallel. The whalers only had an ordinary whaling outfit, while on the Jeannette they had everything including perhaps what may be the most necessary for polar navigation, pluck and brains. I know De Long very well and of course if I had any fears for his safety I should feel extremely anxious.

The Central Pacific Dividend.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—The Post says As we close the following announcement comes to us. The matter of the Central Pacific dividend has been satisfactorily arranged to-day before U S Judge Choate in chambers, the officials of the government simply filing their bill and the court accepting the personal bond of C P Huntington and others. No injunction was asked for and the dividend will be paid as advertised.

NEW YORK, Jan 28—Papers were filed in the U S circuit court for this district by the U S attorney general, through District Attorney Woodford, against the Central Pacific Railroad Company viz, Leland Standford, Charles Crocker, W V Huntington, E. W Hopkins, F H Miller and C P Huntington, touching the payment of the moneys due to the United States and an injunction granted by Judge Choate restraining said company from paying the 3 per cent dividend which they declared payable to stockholders on Feb 1st prox. Bonds were filed to await final decision of the court in the sum of $750 000, Collis C Huntington, Leland Standford and Charles Crocker becoming bondsmen. The government claims that under what is known as the Thurman bill the company has not provided for interest on the bonds, for which it is responsible to the government.

A Long Career of Embezzlement.

DETROIT, Jan. 28—A defalcation of $25 000 or $30,000 has been discovered in the Detroit savings bank. Two tellers are the guilty parties, Charles G and Herman Sergler, brothers. They had the unlimited confidence of the bank, and have been embezzling 10 or 12 years. They belong to an excellent family. Expensive habits and speculations in New York is the cause.

Sprague Makes Specific Charges.

FULL MEASURE

Of Relief and full "Back Pay" proposed by Senator Dawes for the Ponca Indians.

WASHINGTON, Jan 28—The bill introduced by Senator Dawes to-day to establish the rights of the Ponca Indians and settle their affairs, directs the president to inform all the tribes of Indians that the government recognizes, and regrets the injustice heretofore done the Ponca Indians. It declares and confirms the rights of the Poncas to have and hold their lands in Nebraska and the territory of Dakota which were ceded by the government, directs the secretary of the interior within sixty days after the passage of the act to institute negotiations with the bands of Sioux Indians in whose grant for a reservation the Ponca lands were wrongfully included, for relinquishment of any claim they may have to said Ponca lands, and authorizes the secretary of the treasury to satisfy the Sioux for such relinquishment by giving them other lands or money, or both lands and money. It also requires the secretary after the completion of such negotiations to notify the Poncas that the government will hereafter protect their persons and property upon these lands and informs them that they are free to go upon their old reservation with their movable property, the government paying the cost of transportation. The bill provides for an appropriation of thirty thousand dollars to be expended for their benefit in the erection of dwellings and school houses and for agricultural implements, and also an annual appropriation of $53 000 for a period of five years in addition to all the annuities which may be due them. It provides for the allotment of their lands in severalty, the title to the same not to be subject to alienation or incumbrance, or subject to taxation of any kind for thirty years.

THE ELECTORAL COUNT.

No Prospect of an Arrangement of Rules Respecting it

WASHINGTON, Jan 28—The electoral votes are to be counted one week from next Wednesday, but as yet there is very little prospect of making any previous arrangement to govern the proceedings. It is the intention of the democratic party managers to call up the Morgan Becknell resolution again in the house next Tuesday, but the chances of its passage as heretofore explained, are extremely unpromising in view of the determination of the republicans to continue their filibustering opposition indefinitely and of the further certainty that at least four or five democrats wish to see Speaker Randall's efforts to secure its passage fail. The principal difficulty ahead is that when the vote of Georgia shall be reached by the joint convention the question will arise whether or no it shall be counted. If the vice president assumes the sole right to count the vote and either records it or counts it out it will in either event provoke objection. In 1857 the state of Wisconsin cast the electoral vote on the day after that prescribed by law. There were no rules governing the count then and when in the joint convention Wisconsin was called the tellers listed the vote and the vice president announced it for Fremont and Dayton. Hypothetically it did not effect the result but the two houses separated and debated the question for several days and finally did nothing except to adopt a resolution to notify Buchanan that he had been elected president and Breckenridge vice president. If there are no rules adopted between now and February 9th Georgia will probably be counted as was Wisconsin in 18

THE WAR WITH THE BOERS

Her Majesty's Forces Out-generaled—A Little Fight

LONDON, Jan 28—News from the Transvaal [illegible] that the Boers have taken up [illegible] Drakensberg Pass, which is among the last [illegible] I ascertain [illegible] that the [illegible] they have [illegible] be only about twenty [illegible] the worst places in the mountains [illegible] will enable the [illegible] await the [illegible] levies [illegible] and will [illegible] rough travelling. The Boers will leave behind them a country [illegible] plain through which [illegible] being nearly all [illegible] can retreat much faster than the British can follow.

A correspondent at Durban says The Boers are anxious to know if Gen Colley has [illegible] first [illegible] provisions [illegible] The [illegible] is [illegible] but is covered by the guns of the fort.

A Trifling Engagement

CAPE TOWN, Jan 28—Gen Colley's artillery [illegible] fire upon the Boers and the infantry advanced [illegible] upon the Boers retreat [illegible] It is said that the Boers had received reinforcements from Heidelberg. Their forces opposing the general Colley number between 2000 and 3000. They returned the British fire. The engagement seems to have been trifling.

Gen Colley's Report of the Fight

LONDON, Jan 28—In the house of commons to-day Right Hon Hugh C. E. Childers secretary of war announced that Sir George Colley telegraphed on the 26th as follows: Attack on the pass repulsed. Casualties heavy but not yet known. I hold the camp until the arrival of reinforcements.

The secretary of war said that he believed the English attack had been repulsed.

Still Another Account

A dispatch from Durban gives the following account of the engagement with the Boers. Gen Colley's advance guard consisting of a portion of the 58th regiment and a force of horsemen attacked the Boers' position. The attack was at first partially successful but subsequently the Boers were strongly reinforced and repulsed the British troops with heavy loss, the Boers suffering severely. Both sides maintain their former positions but Gen Sir George Colley must now await the infantry portion of his troops which arrived at Durban by the Euphrates last Thursday and are now on the way to Pietermaritzburg by railroad. But then they have 200 miles to march before they can join Gen Colley. Horses to mount the hussars who arrived at the same time are still on the way from Cape Town.

A POSTAL TELEGRAPH SCHEME.

Statement of a Bill offered in the Senate by [illegible] Kirkwood.

WASHINGTON, Jan 28—Kirkwood introduced a bill in the senate to-day in aid of the United States postal telegraph company of Iowa to extend its operations all over the United States, a message not to cost over twenty cents for twenty words. It also provides rates for postal service in connection with it which are one cent for drop letter delivery, two cents for carrier delivery and such rates as may be fixed by the postmaster general for special delivery, when a receipt may be demanded by the sender. It provides that within twenty days after the enactment of this bill the company shall commence the construction of its plans and within twelve months thereafter shall connect the cities of Washington and New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond, Charleston, New Orleans, Pittsburg, Chicago, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, St Louis and intermediate cities with its lines. Within three years thereafter the lines must be increased to 10 000 miles in length and within seven years 70 000 miles and at the rate thereafter that congress may from time to time direct. The capital stock is to be limited to $100,000 000 issuable in two series, 'A' and 'B,' of equal amounts, each series limited to $45 per mile for each mile of line equipped, and $30 per mile for each additional wire. Series A is to be a dividend bearing stock and shall alone represent the ownership and management of the property. This stock is to be sold to the public to provide means for construction purposes. Series B is to be non-dividend bearing and allowed no voice in the management of the affairs of the company except in the disposition of its property and franchises by sale or lease and shall be donated to the United States government in return for privileges granted and as a bar to the disposal of its franchises or property.

The Eastern War.

ST PETERSBURG, Jan 28—News from Erquez of the 18th states that in the sortie on the 10th the Turcomans captured 60 soldiers, whom they immediately murdered. The Ashbad Turcomans captured and killed 100 Persian riders. The victorious Lieut Gen Skobeloff has been appointed general of infantry and the czar has conferred upon him the decoration of the order of St. George.

House of Commons.

LONDON, Jan 28—In the house of commons Parnell refused to allow a division to-night and it is considered probable that the sitting will be protracted all night. The Marquis of Hartington says that the government's decision in regard to Candahar was taken with the full knowledge of the probable success of the Russians at Geok Tepe.

Riot at Leigh.

After a meeting which was attended by 20 000 miners at Leigh to-day a desperate riot ensued. Hussars, infantry and police were on the ground. The riot act was read and the hussars then charged upon the mob. Several miners and policemen were injured.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Hunting the Culprit.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—The committee on elections to-day examined a number of senate employes in regard to the publication of the Chinese treaties. All testified that they had nothing to do with the disclosure of these documents, and know nothing of the means of their getting out, a fact universally conceded, as the officers and other employes of the senate have never been known to give out contraband information. It is understood that the next step of the committee will be to request statements on this subject from all the senators individually.

Swayne Resigns—Matthews Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Jan 27—Justice Swayne resigned yesterday. Stanley Matthews was to-day appointed to be his successor.

Attempt to Make an Official Bargain.

NEW YORK, Jan 28—The Herald's Washington special says There is a movement among certain anti administration senators to defeat the nomination of Stanley Matthews as associate justice of the supreme court. There is an intimation from some of the senators that the withdrawal by the president of some other objectionable nominations understood to be from New York would secure the confirmation of Mr Matthews.

A Wrathful Enumerator

The census enumerator in New Haven was very wroth and proposed to arrest somebody. He went to a fine house and could find nobody at home. The servant girl was impertinent and would give no information. In despair he finally threatened to take the number of the house and have it reported to headquarters as one where the people were recalcitrant. To this end he inquired who owned the house and where he could be found. The reply was Mr Walker and he lives at Washington. Just then it flashed across the enumerator's intelligence that he was about to report to headquarters the residence of the Chief of the Census Bureau Gen F A Walker and he concluded to seek such information as he needed in another quarter.

A Centenarian's Opinion of Burns.

Mrs Cunningham a woman of 102 years living at Mallet Schench eight miles south of Glasgow is said to be the only living person that has seen the poet Burns. Her father occupied a neighboring farm when Burns and his brother Gilbert owned Mossgiel and she repeatedly saw and heard the poet cracking jokes with her elder sister for whom he had a passing fancy. To this day the good old woman canna understan' what the folk mak sic a wark about Burns for—a lowse, thriftless fellow and fain o' the dram. Mrs Cunningham is still hale in mind and voice.

Accident to the Schooner "Seventy-Six"—The Weather

PORT TOWNSEND, Jan 29—Advices from Neah bay report that on the morning of the 24th inst. during the most violent gale that has ever been known since white people have inhabited that place the schooner Seventy-Six, Capt Jerry Potts, dragged her anchors and was washed ashore and but for the strenuous efforts of the people of the life-saving station and the valuable experience and assistance of Capt Chas Willoughby, Indian agent, she would have been blown straight upon the large boulders on shore. Next morning Charley Willoughby had about 40 men digging the sand from around her so as to be able to pass ropes under her keel in order to lash empty oil tanks on each side to float her at high tide, after which the steamer Goliah pulled on her hawser and towed her off.

About 12 inches of snow fell here yesterday but the sun is shining brightly and a thaw is probable.

FROM THE NORTH

Mount Baker "On a Bust"—General British Columbia News.

VICTORIA, Jan 29—Letters from Matsqui nearly at the foothills of Mount Baker announce that the mountain is throwing out dense volumes of smoke while all night sparks of fire are discernible. Matsqui and Upper Sumas are admirably located for observing this phenomenon as the mountain looms to the height of 12 000 feet at a distance of about 50 miles and is clothed in white half way down its side all the year round. The eruption is said to be a fine sight from the above mentioned points which it would well repay a trip up the Fraser to witness.

It is rumored that a San Francisco company have bonded the anthracite coal mines on Queen Charlotte's Island for $275 000.

A terrible snow storm raged for fifteen hours yesterday. It was accompanied by a high wind. River and gulf traffic business were entirely suspended, the public schools were closed and telegraph lines prostrated. To-day the weather is mild and calm with a dark sky. Sleighing is excellent and every description of conveyance on runners are flying through the streets. In the districts there is three feet of snow.

Silver Certificates.

An Omaha dispatch of the 24th says For the past three weeks almost the whole of the currency received here from the east has been in silver certificates of the denomination of $5 $10 and $20. The unusual influx of this money is the occasion of much apprehension among bankers and business men generally, who allege that it is the result of a scheme on the part of the great corporations of the east to debase the silver dollar. They assert that the banks of New York and other eastern cities are hoarding the greenbacks and national bank notes and pushing out the silver certificates in endless quantities and at the proper time will refuse them entirely and demand a premium of 1 or 2 per cent on greenbacks and national bank notes which call for gold while the silver certificates or white backs as they are termed here, are payable in silver dollars. Another theory is that this general circulation of the silver certificate and the consequent appreciation of the silver dollar is done as a preliminary step towards moving upon congress to make the silver equal in value to gold. Unless this can be accomplished, it is claimed that gold is sure to flow out of the United States and silver to be at a discount. For this reason they urge that our abundant supply of silver must be protected by legislation, and given a value equal or even superior to gold in foreign countries. This is the course suggested by the president of the Banking Association of the United States at the meeting of the association at Saratoga last year. The county treasurer of this county received from Kansas City yesterday in payment of some railroad taxes $6000 in silver certificates, and refusal to accept them. The state treasurer declines to take them, except in such amounts as can be paid out readily in the course of the day's business. He said that, by a strict construction of the law, he would not be allowed to accept them as lawful money in any quantity, as they are not legal tender, and it is probable he will decline them hereafter. The several banks of this city report that, of the total amount of money now held by them, fully two-thirds is in silver certificates, and in the absence of any explanation of their sudden extensive circulation much uneasiness prevails. The treasurer of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad sent to St Louis for currency this week and received $70,000 in silver certificates which have been paid out here.

Bernhardt at Chicago

[From the Inter Ocean.]

Within was a brilliant scene. The house was densely crowded and faces of well known citizens were everywhere visible. Every lady had evidently made some special adornment to celebrate the evening and the display was almost as brilliant as any opera ever given in the city. Every lady who had recently been intending to get a new evening bonnet for some little time appeared in the fruition of her intention last evening and wore it with a grace of enjoyment which at least partially commensurated with her enjoyment of the artistic representation of Adrienne Lecouvreur. In a sudden ecstasy of fashion bonnets have embraced the head of beauty and now the longing look at play or opera no longer [illegible] by the [illegible] of fashionable gay caps waving above the seats in front. Between the acts was a great discussion of the play and a great fluttering of the leaves of the book of the play. For truth to tell the first night with Parisian tongue did sometimes forget the words they have learned and the books are a wonderful help. There were a great many French people in the audience last night and in addition the [illegible] element [illegible] knew any of the [illegible] academy [illegible] just a little [illegible] heard the chatter before the curtain [illegible] might have felt a Parisian atmosphere which she [illegible] not felt before since leaving [illegible].

Boston Journal rep The burden of taxation is that assessed for municipal purposes. Good streets, proper sewerage, free schools, waterworks and all the requirements of a people living in a city require large expenditure of money. It cannot be otherwise. In the expenditure of this money there is opportunity for the exercise of the highest executive capacity. There is public business that may be entrusted to most any man but it is not municipal. For that the ripest judgment and the best capacity should be sought and secured. This fact will be impressed upon the citizen when he realize the large expenditures and the manifold and difficult duties which municipal officers are required to do. And yet there is reason to believe that comparatively few persons realize the importance of securing the best ability for municipal affairs when they vote at the municipal elections.

London Spectator Ireland is a damp little island intended by nature to be a more beautiful Holland, the property of men half sailors and half dairy maids, with endless bays, and harbors and fords and lakes and pasturage for fat cattle, and therefore it has been given to a people who love the petite culture, who multiply faster than their means, and who have a special distaste or incapacity for the life of mariners, fishermen, or seagoing traders. There is one great race in the world which does not understand or like the Keltic genius, specially hates their faults, is blind to their many virtues, has objects and wishes essentially different from theirs, so that race is bound by inexorable political geography to conciliate or govern Irishmen. The land is one in which cereals should not be grown, so the effort of centuries has been to grow cereals. There is one edible which will grow there easily which the people like and which will like rice support excessive numbers, so the potato alone among edibles is stricken with deadly disease. The people have special domesticity and it keeps them overnumerous, a special love of their home and it keeps them always poorer, special patriotism and it blinds them utterly to the true place of their country in the world. They are so brave that they will not look forward, so faithful to each other that law is nearly impossible, so lovable that every immigrant catches all their faults and the leaven, instead of leavening, becomes more doughy than the dough.

Toledo Blade Though several southern papers revive the wearisome prate about the incoming president adopting such a magnanimous policy toward the south as will restore harmony between the estranged sections, the majority have the good taste to see that this cant has been worn threadbare by the bad usage received in three presidential elections and they refrain. All sensible people comprehend that Gen Garfield's administration has no right to make any difference in its treatment of the south from that of any other section. There is to be no more coddling of that sulky section. EDISON'S LIGHT

An Exhibition—The Difficulties of Introducing it in New York City

Mr Edison returned to the old laboratory and approached a table fringed with magnetic batteries. An instrument resembling a German wheel of fortune occupied the center of the table. The inventor turned the dial to the right. In an instant 800 electric lights were aglow within a radius of a mile. Each light cast a pale orange tint upon the snow. The laboratory, the machine shops, the many private dwellings were also illuminated. The glossy beavers, gray mustaches, gold rimmed spectacles and ivory handled umbrellas of the capitalists were brought into bold relief.

Mr Edison suddenly turned the dial to the left. The 800 lights went out and the orange glow faded from the fields of snow. A few sickly gaslights made the capitalists appear like shadows. The dial was again turned to the right and the 800 lights again flooded the snowy fields with light. It was not a brilliant light. It distressed the eye no more than gas. The subdivision seemed perfect. Each light in the apartment was turned on or off by a thumbscrew the same as gas. A strap was adjusted to an electric engine so small that it would go into a shoe box and the same power that made the electric light set in motion two sewing machines, a pump and a blower. The exquisite little engine ran as noiseless as an escapement watch. With its aid the power required to run one light runs a sewing machine.

Nine generators were in use. The inventor is making a huge generator which he says will furnish electricity for 1000 or 1200 lights, under the work of a Powers engine. With this engine an assistant says that he gets 40 per cent more speed with the same amount of fuel. The faster the generators revolve the more electricity and consequently the more light.

"The light is now perfected" said the inventor last evening "and I am now awaiting the action of the company."

The capitalists departed on the 6 30 train in the light of the 800 lights. On the way to New York one of the stockholders said "We are entirely satisfied with the light. It is no stock jobbing speculation. I don't believe you could buy a share of the stock for love or money. We have already taken measures to introduce the light in New York City. All that is necessary to make a plant in the city is to get an engine and transfer the generators from Menlo Park to some station down town. The trouble is that we are already beset with hungry politicians. Under Mayor Cooper's administration they wanted to tax us 20 cents per lineal foot to lay our mains. In addition to this they wanted 3 per cent of our gross receipts after five years, and a pledge to light the city over afterward at 10 per cent above the cost of the light. Considering that the gas companies pay the city literally nothing for the privileges we think these demands refreshingly cool. We don't want to be forced to go to Newark, or Brooklyn or Philadelphia to introduce the light. We want to make our start on Manhattan Island, and under Mayor Grace's administration we are in hopes of receiving a fair consideration. Give us a decent show and you will see the light in practical use in New York within a year."

PENNSYLVANIA ASTONISHED

[Correspondence Philadelphia Times.]

Not so many people were attracted to the senate, but at the very outset occurred one of the most remarkable things that have ever happened upon the floor of that chamber. Senator Eckley B Coxe of Luzerne, who occupied a seat to the extreme right of the presiding officer declined to take the oath. He immediately attracted everybody's attention. He is a man of imposing presence, of singularly pleasant face with the keenest black eyes. Understanding clearly his purpose, he said he knew his action was a forfeiture of his seat and and then he asked leave to read to the senate an address which he had prepared for his constituents. Permission granted, Mr Coxe, with some emotion, read an address reviewing the oath to be taken, and asserted that he used money for expenses not authorized by law during his canvass for senator such as furnishing campaign clubs, paying taxes, employing men at the polls. Not a dollar was spent, however, for improper or corrupt purposes. He was aware of his doing wrong after he had spent some of the money but he would not withdraw from the campaign because he feared it would jeopardize the whole democratic ticket in Luzerne. He detailed at considerable length the various items of expenditure which created a general smile, as there was probably not a senator on the floor who had not used money in very much the same way. Speaking of the matter afterwards, Mr Coxe said that the only expense he neglected to speak of in the address was that for a dish of oysters for some campaign worker. He further said privately, that he had no reason whatever for his action other than given in the address. This action naturally created a sensation.

Mr Coxe is a democrat who was elected over Charles A Miner, a popular republican in the Wilkesbarre district and it is generally conceded that his candidacy was the strength which pulled the whole democratic ticket through in that county. The universal opinion naturally is that he has placed a forced construction upon the law, but all the same he has done a very wholesome thing in giving the law an interpretation which must bring attention either to secure a more rigid enforcement or an authoritative explanation of it. I am satisfied that while Mr Coxe probably does not care for the office he has done a thoroughly conscientious thing, but nobody ought to expect the average member of the legislature, who has gone further against the law than Mr Coxe, to sustain this idea. The reports that the action was the result of threats that Mr Coxe will be prosecuted if he took the oath can only be regarded as ridiculous by those who know the man. He is not one easily frightened. Mr Coxe left for home this afternoon and a new election will be ordered but he says he will not again be a candidate.

The Ingenious Briton.

[From the Spectator.]

At this time many stories were current as to the seizure of smuggled goods in the Underclift and at Niton, or of the successful outwitting of the revenue officers—this among others. A farming man going one morning to milk some cows in a meadow near the sea found a keg of spirits on the shore. This he managed to open and poured the contents into his milk pail and then filling up the keg with sea water he sent it as far as possible out to sea. Having concealed his spoil for future removal he proceeded to call the coastguard's attention to the floating keg, at the same time claiming the reward for the discovery of contraband goods. How he would have accounted for the [illegible] contents of his milk pail had it been detected it is difficult to say. But the following anecdote may suggest his possible explanation.

GREAT SALT LAKE.

Some of the Peculiarities of the Big Inland Sea

One of the wonders of Utah is that of the Great Salt Lake. At present it occupies a space equal to about three thousand square miles. The greatest length is ninety three miles while the greatest width is forty three. Several large islands rise to great heights above the surface, the largest of which is over thirty miles long and in the widest place about twelve miles across and it is mountainous in its character with streams of water formed by springs and drainage flowing through the ravines and canyons. On this island which is called by the names of Antelope or Church island ranchemen have raised herds of horses, cattle and sheep upon the rich grasses found there. The other islands of which there are several are small and inhabited by loons and sea gulls. The flow of water into the lake from the rivers of Bear, Weber and Jordan and of numerous small streams from actual measurement is over 6000 cubic feet per minute, a quantity sufficient to cover the lake in one year to a depth of forty inches. But the evaporation is so great in this climate that this great influx is overcome, and the lake remains much the same in hight from year to year. In the spring the water is some inches higher than at any other period. The greatest depth of water yet fathomed is sixty feet. While the waters of the sea contain about two per cent salt, that of the Great Salt Lake contains about twenty-two per cent or about one-fifth the bulk. During the summer season the lake water becomes warm and makes an agreeable and invigorating bath, which is taken advantage of by thousands, not only as a source of enjoyment but for the cure of chronic and other diseases for which it has proven very efficacious. At Lake Point, Black Rock and Lake Shore ample provision has been made for the accommodation and comfort of bathers, and during the past season, which was a very short one, fully 30,000 baths were taken. A steamboat makes excursions during the summer for the accommodation of parties, who enjoy the grand lake scenery, dancing and other amusements in the cabin of the large steamer. One great source of wealth comes from the immense deposit of white crystalized salt that deposits on the shores and is scooped up and sent off for use in the silver mills of Idaho, Montana, Nevada and Colorado. The past year fully 10 000 tons of salt have been gathered from the lake and shipped for use. Citizens of Utah use this salt for domestic purposes, while cabinets of minerals are incomplete without a sample of the beautiful salt crystalized on some shrub which found its way into the waters of this briny inland sea. During storms waves rise so high that it is exceedingly dangerous for boats to be out from safe harbor.

The Earth's Population.

Behm and Wagner, in the last edition of their book on the population of the earth, estimate the entire population of the inhabited globe at 1,456 000,000 persons. Europe, without counting Iceland and Nova Zembla, is believed to have 315 929 000 inhabitants on an area of 176,349.9 German square miles, or at the rate of 1791 persons to the German square mile. Asia is put down as having 834,707 000 inhabitants, on 809 478 square mile—that is, 1031 persons to the square miles. Africa, as having 205,679,000 inhabitants on 543,178 square miles, or 378 persons to the square mile. America as having 95 495,500 on 697,138 5 square miles, or 137 to the square mile. Australasia, as having 4,031,000 on 162,609 square miles—that is 24 persons to the square mile. The Arctic regions are assumed to have 82,000 inhabitants on 82,091 square mile, or about one person to every square mile. The sum total as observed, is 1 455,923,500 persons on 2,470,-103 4 square miles or at the rate of 589 persons to the German square mile. The German empire comprises 9,815 6 square miles, with a population in 1878 of 44 210 948 persons.

Catarrhal
D[illegible] S[illegible]

Wei De Meyer's Treatise on Catarrh, explains the following important facts:
1. That Catarrhal Colds become a poisonous infection, at first local, and finally constitutional.
2 That, being Constitutional, the infection is beyond the reach of mere local remedies.
3 That impurities in the nostrils, are necessarily swallowed into the stomach and inhaled into the lungs, thus poisoning the Digestive, Respiratory and Genito-urinary organs.
4. That Catarrhal virus follows the mucous membrane and causes Deafness, Dyspepsia, Chronic Diarrhœa, Bronchitis, Leucorrhœa, and Consumption.
5. That Smokes, Douches, Inhalations, and Insoluble Snuffs, cannot possibly remove infectious inflammation from the organs named.
6. That an antidote for Catarrh must possess an inoculative affinity for, and the quality of being absorbed by, the purulent mucous wherever located.
Based upon these plain theories, Dr. Wei De Meyer's Catarrh Cure has proved to be infallible. It not only relieves, it cures Catarrh at any stage. Home testimony.

Saved by the Sagacity of a Dog

Herman Hutter and Charles Whitman of Missoula Mon armed with rifles and accompanied by a deerhound went up the Rattlesnake in quest of game. They climbed the mountains to the left of the stream and separately [illegible] opposite sides of the ridge in the hope of bagging the deer. Whitman came down the Rattlesnake side and soon after separating from his companion he slipped and fell sliding some two hundred feet down the mountain side. He vainly endeavored to stop himself by digging into the snow with hand and feet and clutching at brush and saplings, till just as he was about to be precipitated over the cliff into the Rattlesnake some forty feet below he fortunately clasped a strong sapling with one hand and was left dangling in the air over the precipice. By a strong effort he managed to clasp the sapling with his arm in the elbow and grasping his wrist with the disengaged hand awaited his inevitable fall with desperation. The hound seeing his master fall, followed him to the edge of the cliff and whined piteously at the predicament of his human friend. Suddenly he dashed over the hill like a deer and disappeared. When nearly exhausted Whitman heard his companion Hutter above him coming to his assistance. He gathered renewed courage and held on desperately till Hutter came down with a rope and rescued him from his perilous position. Hutter says he had gone but a short distance when the dog came upon him and seized hold of his clothing, whining. He turned upon him and the dog ran off. Repeating the strange manœuvre, Hutter suspected something wrong and followed the dog to Whitman's rescue.

THE SALVAGE QUESTION.

The mercantile community in the several ports of Puget Sound are somewhat surprised at the claim put in by Goodall, Perkins & Co., agents of the steamship Victoria, for six per cent. salvage upon the cargo of the steamship Dakota owned by the same parties. It will be remembered that on the 12th of the present month the latter vessel was on her way from San Francisco to Puget Sound when she broke the shaft between her paddle wheels and put back to the former port in a crippled condition. On the 13th she was overtaken by the Victoria and towed into San Francisco. It is for this service that the claim of salvage has been presented.

The Dakota was brought into Pacific waters in 1875 by Capt. Nat. Ingersoll, at present a resident of this city. While passing through the Straits of Magellan, at that time, she broke the same shaft and lay to while it was being enclosed within a journal or mandrel composed of two hemispheres strongly bolted together. On her arrival at San Francisco a port survey was held upon her and the engineers united in the opinion that the shaft was as good as new or that it certainly would not again break in the same place. The recent accident proves the sagacity of their opinions for the shaft broke at the opposite wheel. For the past six years the Dakota has made regular trips to the Sound and, under the good seamanship of Capt. Morse, has attained the punctuality of a river ferry boat.

Had the break occurred in the same place it broke before, negligence on the part of the ship's owners might easily be proven and the claim for salvage rejected. Or had the disaster taken place about the harbor of San Francisco and been towed into port by tugs owned by the claimants and employed in towing on the bar of that harbor, there might be a doubt as to the justice of the claim. But no such circumstances exist. The accident occurred off Coos Bay, about twenty-five miles from shore, so that the ship was on the high seas and in manifest peril; for between Astoria and San Francisco there is, at this season of the year, no harbor which a ship of the Dakota's size could either enter with safety or hope to get out again. Crescent City and Port Orford are the only roadsteads affording sufficient depth of water, and they are barred by special clauses in insurance policies between the 1st of October and the 20th of April following. Hence there was nothing for Capt. Morse to do but to put back to San Francisco.

Again, there is no positive evidence that both ships are the property of like owners. The Victoria is a British ship and cannot make coastwise voyages between American ports, hence she plies between San Francisco and Nanaimo. The Dakota, on the other hand, plies between San Francisco and Tacoma, calling at other Sound ports for transient freights and passengers, because she is an American bottom. It may be that the claimants, Goodall and his associates, own the whole of one vessel and none of the other, yet they may transact all business relating to both as fiduciary agents. If John Doe purchases a steamship and has no route ready for her to run upon, it is to his advantage to place his ship in the line of Richard Roe, who is already engaged in the transportation business, and to pay him a reasonable portion of her earnings. No sensible man of business would refuse such an opportunity.

But suppose, for the sake of argument, that both vessels are the absolute property of Goodall and his associates, or that he alone owned both. Even in that event the claim seems correctly founded, although six per cent. may be exorbitant, though we have no right to say it is, and we do not know it is not. It may be argued that it is to every man's interest to protect his own property, which is correct. But the question at issue is that the steamship Victoria's business was to carry coal to San Francisco and not to cruise in search of disabled vessels between that port and Nanaimo. Hence any delay occasioned by rendering succor to any ship whatever, lengthened her voyage and increased its expenditure.

In 1872 the Pacific Mail Steamship Constitution, bound from Panama to San Francisco, broke her shaft off the islands in the Santa Barbara channel and was overtaken by the steamer Orizaba, then owned by the same company and plying to San Diego. The latter vessel was 87 hours towing the crippled monster into port, as she had 1800 tons of freight on her. A claim of five per cent. was made at the time, and at first resisted on the ground that both ships belonged to one corporation. Suits were brought to enforce the claim, but they never came to trial, as somebody got an inkling of what Judge Hoffman's decision would be. Therefore the suits were all settled out of court. Considering that the northern coast is more dangerous than the southern, and that five per cent. upon the Constitution's cargo would probably yield to the salvors a greater sum than ten per cent. upon that of the Dakota, which did not exceed 350 tons, the demand in the present case does not look like an exorbitant one. In order that all encouragement may be given to those masters who find vessels in peril to furnish relief and to put forth extraordinary efforts to do so, courts have generally been quite liberal in their allowances of salvage when the claim is founded on justice.

NARROW GAUGE ROADS.

News recently came that a company has entered earnestly upon the work of constructing a narrow gauge railway from St. Louis to Galveston and the line being longer than any narrow gauge road in the country, attention is naturally called to the question whether in many sections which furnish comparatively little business a good deal of money is not uselessly tied up in broad or standard gauge roads. Their original cost is double that of the narrow gauge and a grade of about 116 feet to the mile is all they can profitably stand. Then, every train with locomotive and twenty cars on a broad gauge track is forced to move 140 tons of dead matter whenever it is in motion. That is a broad gauge locomotive with twenty empty box cars attached, weighs more than a narrow gauge locomotive with twenty cars each loaded with seven tons freight. It is claimed that had the Central and Union Pacific roads been built with a 36-inch gauge and had the track been laid with 40-pound rails, the two roads would so far have been able to do all that they have done; the original cost would have been $50,000,000 less than the present roads cost, and the expenses for running and repairs would have been $2,000,000 per annum less than they have been. The saving to the country would have been at least $1,000,000 per annum.

Further, we may come nearer home and if the figures given by engineers be correct, the work of the California & Oregon Railroad Company is a striking illustration of the position that through mountainous regions especially, none but narrow gauge roads should be built. The Oregon road running to Roseburg and the California road to Redding a gap of 275 miles is left over which to construct a broad gauge road would cost for grading alone, on a maximum grade of 116 feet, not less than $80,000 a mile, a sum which the business of the country adjacent could not pay the interest upon for years to come. The money expended on the two ends of the line would have built and perfectly equipped a narrow gauge road for the entire distance, and would before this time have transfigured northern California and southern Oregon. But in the southern States is where these narrow gauge roads should be adopted. There much of the country is level, the people are poor, and the journals of that region are crying out for more roads. At the same time neither the country nor the people can pay running expenses and interest on rail roads that cost $[illegible],000 per mile. The standard gauge of railroads in the south is 60 inches. All, except one or two trunk lines, should as soon as possible be reduced to 36 inches. This would reduce the tariff on freights and fares 50 per cent on the present charges and leave a profit. To gain trade Cincinnati last year completed a broad gauge road to Chattanooga. The road is now $18,000,000 in debt, and it brings little trade to Cincinnati. The money the road owes would have built and equipped a through narrow gauge line from Cincinnati to Savannah, and to Charleston, giving Cincinnati two seaports, and giving the road a lucrative business. If a merchant here were to keep an eight mule team to deliver packages around town, or were a livery stable keeper to hitch up a six horse coach to go after a servant girl's trunks, people would say it was all folly. And yet neither would be more ridiculous than to construct broad gauge railroads through these hills. As it is railroads are absorbing too much of the money of the country, and if a road that costs $10,000 per mile will do all the work of a country, that is all a road costing $40,000 per mile can do, and the repairs and running expenses of the little road are much less than on the big one, and the interest saved on $30,000 per mile is a very great sum if the road is long enough.

WEST POINT PRIDE.

The officers in the regular army who have been educated at West Point have always maintained a sort of aristocracy, which did not tolerate those who had to reach their rank from some other source. The law which gives the president power to retire officers on three-fourths pay, when they have reached the age of sixty-two, raises a question which had been made the occasion for the display of this feeling on the part of the West Point graduates, in a manner not relished by the country, which deems that something is due to those who have done so much for the preservation of liberty and national honor, though they may not have come from that military school. Very seldom is an officer who has graduated at West Point named for retirement who does not take it as an offense, some of them even considering it as an outrage. Gen. Sherman and other army officers admit that the army is top heavy and that the officers are out of proportion to the enlisted men. Then why not reduce the official force and give the young men a chance. There is no way of getting these young officers out of the way. They may not have been educated at West Point, many of them were not, but they were trained on the hard fought fields from 1861 to 1865. However, the West Pointers have come to regard themselves as the salt of the earth in military matters and the graduates of that institution as possessing a sort of divine right to rule the military world of America. Without disparagement of the merits of many true, brave and accomplished soldiers who have come from the West Point school, it is but fair that the government should recognize the claims of those men at the close of the war who were commissioned in the regular army, generally as second lieutenants, though a few of them of higher rank. At the bottom of this objection to retiring the West Pointers lie these facts: The young men appointed from alleged civil life but really from the army are looked upon by many of the West Point men as intruders. The officers who came into the service from the volunteers are sometimes spoken of as, and even one distinguished general who had been educated better in military tactics than in good manners, at government expense, has called them "mustang soldiers." This term grows out of a sort of pride felt by those who have had the advantages which West Point furnishes, and which has grown into a feeling that amounts almost to a precedent that they should hold all the high and honorable positions in the army. If the elderly officers are retired the system of promotion will bring these "mustangs" forward and some day one of them might even become the head of the army.

Those, who constitute the West Point class corporation forget that Washington, Wilkinson, McComb and Scott, former commanders of the army, two of them being regarded as very successful generals, were "mustangs." Military schools have turned out a good many men who have ranked high as soldiers, but some have failed as have some of those who came from the walks of civil life. What did the military training of Rupert and his royal uncle avail as against the genius, the common sense and the organizing mind of Cromwell, the farmer and brewer who entered the army when over forty years of age. West Point graduates have forced a sort of distinction which the country insists the president should not allow to be made between officers of the army. Those officers who have earned their shoulder straps in active service of the country, if qualified, ought to receive the same honors which are given to those who claim preference because of the place and manner of their education.

On Saturday morning THE OREGONIAN contained a column-long list of names forming the "Roll of Honor" of the public schools of this city. It would naturally be supposed that children thus distinguished were the brightest and best in the schools; but, singularly, the essential matters of scholarship and deportment are not considered in forming this high-named roll, punctuality of attendance being the sole criterion of honor. Thus a point of discipline, important, it is true, but by no means paramount, is exalted above the highest qualities of merit. As the rules stand, no degree of personal excellence, nor perfection in studies on the part of children can atone for absence, however brief, even though it be for causes proscribed by the board of direction, and unavoidable. So it often occurs that children who have failed in examinations, and whose single merit is regularity of attendance, are recorded and published at the end of the term as worthy of honor, while others whose conduct is better in every other respect must suffer, as only children can suffer, the humiliation of being left out. To be named upon the roll of honor is one of the prizes of youth and and a creditable object of ambition and effort among children. It is not right to base such a distinction upon a mere item of school discipline to which all cannot conform, and to exclude from rivalry for it those qualities everywhere recognized as the most worthy. We do not wish to be understood as saying that all these children named in the roll of honor published Saturday last did not deserve the compliment implied. Most of them did without doubt, but not all; and many others whose names did not appear were worthy of honorable mention.

The population of the United States, on the first day of June last, was 50,152,559. If the rate of increase from 1870 to 1880 has been maintained since June, the population of the nation on the first day of January 1881 was [illegible].

NOT SUSPENDED PUBLICATION.—The statement which appeared in Saturday's OREGONIAN, to the effect that the Commercial Reporter had suspended publication last week, in consequence of the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage of $500, held by E. M. [illegible] against J. F. Atkinson and James R. Parrish, was erroneous. As near as can be ascertained the facts are as follows: Last Tuesday a quantity of the material belonging to Messrs. Atkinson & Parrish was attached by Sheriff Buchtel in satisfaction of the chattel mortgage mentioned. According to the chattel mortgage the following described property was levied upon: "Two imposing stones, two double stands, one single case, 1200 pounds of nonpareil type, 2300 pounds of bourgeois, brevier, minion and display type." This material has been and is still used in the publication of the Commercial Reporter and Sunday Welcome. The closing of the office by the sheriff would of necessity have compelled at least the temporary suspension of those papers. Not wishing to injure the business of the young gentlemen who are publishing the Welcome, and Mr. Jas. R. Leahy, the lessee of the Commercial Reporter, Sheriff Buchtel placed the office in temporary charge of the latter gentleman. This enabled them to issue, as usual, the papers. Satisfactory arrangements, it is understood, have been effected by which there will be no future interruptions in the publication. Mr. Leahy, of the Commercial Reporter, concluded to change the day of the publication of his paper from Thursday to Friday; and as it failed last week, for some reason, to reach this office on the usual day, the inference was but natural that it had been suspended. Hereafter the Reporter will be issued on Friday of each week. The statement of suspension was based on the circumstances of the attachment and a common rumor, and certainly was not made with any motive to injure the business of Mr. Leahy.

O. T. SERVICES.—The special open temperance services at the Congregational church attracted a very large congregation. The music of Prof. Cook was excellent, especially the hymn "Mourn for the Thousand Slain." A short address was made by C. J. McDougall, the president of the O. T. Society, who was followed by the Rev. J. A. Cruzan, who in a brief, pithy speech, made a very strong impression on the audience in favor of the cause of temperance. Rev. G. W. Izer next addressed the congregation, making one of the most powerful appeals for the downtrodden ever made in the church. A collection was taken up for the benefit of the temperance organization, which amounted to $25 30.

A PAYING STAR.—A letter has been received from Mr. Marcus R. Mayer, the well-known dramatic agent and manager, under date of Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 18th, from which the following extract is made: "The business with Bernhardt is great. In Chicago last week her receipts were $20,650. The largest receipts in this country for seven performances were $[illegible] and the smallest we have had were $16,822. Our receipts for the ten weeks we have been out, have been $227,372. We have her yet for fifteen weeks from to-day. I shall perhaps go to Europe with her in May."

APPLICATION FOR PARDON.—An exchange says: Governor Newell had an application signed by upwards of one hundred persons, asking for the pardon of young man Lord, sentenced to prison for an attempt at train wrecking, which he declined. He does not regard it as the province of the executive to set aside the operations of the law, only for very grave reasons. He also feels that an attempt at train wrecking is a very heinous offence against humanity, and ought to be severely punished.

STEAMER ARRIVED.—The Oregon which was due Friday evening arrived here at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She picked up the outer buoy at 6 A. M. Friday, but the bar was too rough to permit crossing as she put to sea. Very rough weather prevailed during the day and night. She returned to the river Saturday morning, crossed in at 11 A. M. and left for Portland at 4 P. M. She anchored twenty miles above Astoria for the night and left at daylight.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHOIR.—Mrs. D. S. Tuthill, whose finished mezzo-soprano voice won such general commendation at the "Home" concert last week, has been engaged as a member of the quartette choir of Dr. Lindsley's church and sang there yesterday for the first time. This quartette—Mrs. Tuthill, soprano; Mrs. Wyatt, contralto; Mr. Schuyler, basso, and Prof. Warren, tenor—is the best organization of its kind in the city.

LAND LEAGUE ENTERTAINMENT.—The matinee performance given Saturday afternoon by the members of the Land League, was very well attended. A very enjoyable programme was rendered. In the evening the third and final performance was given to a large audience. These performances have been very satisfactory to the public and successful to the League. The total proceeds aggregate a very substantial sum.

SANITARY.—The third lecture of the social science course is on sanitary science by Dr. P. T. Keene, who speaks from wide experience on all subjects connected with the care of public health. Dr. Keene was for several years health officer of the District of Columbia, with the largest discretionary powers ever granted in America. His observations on our own city and homes will therefore doubtless be of great value.

PRESENTATION.—Last week several 'longshoremen contributed a handsome sum of money and gave it into the hands of Mr. Hamilton, the ship chandler, to hand to the Sisters of St. Vincent's Hospital as an acknowledgment for numerous kindnesses received while under their care. Sister Theresa received the money with many thanks.

CHINESE FOR THE RAILROADS.—Kwong Tai, the well known Chinese merchant, states that the Northern Pacific and the O. R. & N. Co. will need during the coming summer 4000 Chinese laborers. It will not be possible to secure that number in this city, and many will be brought from San Francisco.

THE "ALDEN BESSE."—The American bark Alden Besse, owned by Capt. J. C. Ainsworth, has been chartered for her return trip from China by Kwong Tai & Co. She will sail from Hongkong about March 1st with a cargo of general merchandise for the firm and 332 Chinamen.

THE SHUBRICK OFF.—Saturday, the steamer Wide West went down the river to where the lighthouse tender Shubrick has been aground. The steamer hitched on, and after taking a pull or two got the tender into deep water again.

TO THE ASYLUM.—An old man named John McCue was arrested on Saturday on a charge of lunacy. He imagines himself to be a police officer, and has been in the habit of reporting at police headquarters. He will be examined to-day.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The annual meeting of the members of the Portland Library Association will be held at the room next Saturday evening for the purpose of hearing the reports of the president, board of directors and librarian.

OREGONIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—In another column will be found the official announcement of the Oregonian Railway Company as to the time of the departures of steamers to connect with the railroads on both sides of the river.

COMMITTED AGAIN.—A few days ago S. Huelat was found on the street of East Portland in a demented condition and taken before Judge Rice. He was adjudged insane and again committed to the asylum.

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY.—There will be no rehearsal to-night as announced. The regular rehearsal will be held on Friday evening. A full attendance is requested.

CONTRACT AWARDED.—The committee on streets has awarded the contract for the construction of the sewer on D street to Mr. S. Wilcox. The contract price is $6412 11.

OPEN TEMPERANCE CONCERT.

The Open Temperance Concert on Saturday evening was a great success, both as a delightful entertainment and financially. The programme attracted a crowded house of the best people of the city. The first song, "Sweet Evening Vesper," was presented with good taste by the glee club, and was followed by an instrumental duet from "Trovatore," by Misses Millard and Holman. This piece was delightfully rendered, eliciting an encore. Major Sears was unavoidably absent from the city. Prof. Henderson volunteered to read the piece that Major was to have read, "The Vagabonds." The reading was almost perfect and elicited most hearty applause. Miss [illegible] followed, singing with great sweetness and spirit "When the Quiet Moon is Beaming." She had to respond to the hearty encore with another song, which she sang in the best of taste, thrilling the audience with delight. Great applause followed. Dr. O. B. Bird gave a number of airs on his crystalines which were executed with so much skill that he had to return to the instrument and respond to the hearty encore. Mrs. Wollener followed, singing "The Lover and the Bird." This was her first appearance before a Portland audience. Her song gave so much pleasure that she had to sing another to satisfy the audience, which she did, eliciting much applause. Mr. Van Bearden was to have sung, but a severe cold prevented his appearance. Mrs. D. Goodsell kindly volunteered to sing "The Three Fishers." This piece, as rendered, was a gem, Mrs. Goodsell singing in her usual good taste, thrilling the audience with her sweet voice, which brought loud applause. Miss Millard in a sweet, distinct and brilliant manner, played a selection on the piano. "Swinging in the Lane" was next sung, and the glee club acquitted itself most creditably, and had to give another in response to an encore. Dr. O. B. Bird created a furor of applause by singing a comic song entitled "Dinah, Dinah, Dinah." The concert closed with a piece by the quartette club, which pleased the audience very much. It is to be hoped that all the concerts of the O. T. A. will be as delightful as the one just given.

THE FREEZE UP

A "Chinook" Saturday, but lower Temperature Yesterday—Boats to Start between The Dalles and Portland To-day.

Saturday's telegrams at 8:30 A. M. from eastern Oregon showed temperature varying from 36 degrees at Wallula to 46 at The Dalles; and at 4:30 P. M. from 32 at Umatilla to 41 at the Cascades. There were strong indications of a "Chinook" all along the line and it seemed almost certain that the blockade would be broken by Tuesday. The ice in the evening had nearly all disappeared at The Dalles and the Cascades, and was fast breaking up at Wallula and Umatilla. But yesterday the thermometer dropped below freezing point, and last night's bulletins from the signal service office do not give hope for much warmer weather to-day.

The Wide West leaves here on schedule time this morning and the R. R. Thompson starts down from The Dalles at 6 o'clock. It is believed that both boats will reach their destination, provided of course that the middle and lower river did not again freeze over last night. Following are yesterday's reports.

10 A. M.

Cascade Locks—Down stream wind; very little ice running.

Cascades—Clear; down stream wind; not much ice in river; therm., 30.

6 P. M.

Wallula—Cloudy; light down wind; river full of heavy ice; therm., 24.

Ainsworth—Cloudy; both rivers full of ice; therm., 26.

Umatilla—Cloudy; southeast wind; river full of running ice and at low stage; therm., 26.

THE FIRST LECTURE.

"The Poets and Poetry of Greece."

The lecture this evening at the Congregational Church on the above named subject cannot fail to be one of great interest and value.

The haze of romance and mystery which surrounds the Grecian poets serves but to add a piquancy to all that is said and written of them.

"Seven cities claim great Homer dead, Thro' which the living Homer begged his bread," shows that uncertainty shrouds the birthplace, if not the very existence of the chief of these ancient bards, and leaves a broad field for the exercise of imagination and conjecture.

But whether Homer lived or not, the Iliad and Odyssey are grand facts in the literary world and possess charms that are found nowhere else. The tragedies of Euripides, Eschylus and Sophocles remain to this day as monuments of the golden age of Grecian civilization.

Dr. Browne is a classical scholar of experience, taste and culture, thoroughly alive to the beauties which lie hidden in the much talked of but little read poetry of Greece, and being a ready and eloquent speaker will present what he has to say in an attractive form. Those who have heard the lecture speak of it in warm terms as an intellectual treat of the highest order, and there no doubt will be a large attendance.

The lecture will be preceded by solos from Miss Kate Freeman and Mrs. David Goodsell.

COMIC OPERA.

Next Friday evening the singing section of the Turn Verein, assisted by leading home talent under leadership of Prof. Stebinger, will produce at Turn Halle the comic opera in three acts, entitled "Die Mordgrundbruck bei Dresden," with full orchestral accompaniment. Following is the cast:

Kunibert von Drachenfels..............Mr. L. Levy
Amalgunde, his daughter..............Mrs. Alisky
Edward, his page..............Mr. J. Leck
Sassafrass von Eulenhorst..............Mr. G. Rau
Two pages..............Messrs. Schulz and Kayser
Prologue..............Mr. G. Franz
Grand chorus of knights..Singing Sec. Turn Verein

The most extensive preparations are being made for the production of the opera, and it is the purpose of the Turn Verein to make it one of the most brilliant affairs of the kind ever given by any German society in this city. Reserved seats can be secured at Alisky & Hegele's, and parties wishing to witness the performance should lose no time in securing tickets, as they are being rapidly disposed of. The curtain will rise at 8 o'clock sharp. For further particulars and argument of the opera, attention is directed to small bills.

ENTERTAINMENT TO MEMBERS OF THE ORDER AT SALEM.

Reed's Opera House filled to Overflowing—Interesting Programme—Addresses by Hon. R. P. Earhart and Hon. J. F. Caples—Supper at the Chemeketa.

The advancement made and the interest shown in the recently organized Ancient Order of United Workmen in this state is almost unprecedented. It is scarcely two years since the first lodge was organized in this city and the order in this state and Washington Territory now numbers almost 2000. The members not only are alive to its interests but those outside the ranks are becoming awakened to the advantages it offers and are flocking to its standard in numbers surprising to say the least. The [illegible] in the neighboring city of Salem is in full accord with its brethren elsewhere and with the view of further promulgating its principles and purposes the various lodges of that city conceived the plan of giving a public entertainment at Reed's Opera House and affording the public generally an opportunity of learning more fully its objects and its plans. A joint committee was appointed by Protection Lodge No. 2 and Valley Lodge No. 18, which, upon organization, appointed sub-committees, all of whom worked earnestly and harmoniously towards making the affair a success. Invitations were extended to the various lodges of Albany, Dallas, Independence and Amity. Hon. John F. Caples of Industry Lodge No. 8 of this city, was invited to deliver the oration, and vocal and instrumental music was provided to add zest to the occasion.

Last Friday evening was set apart for the occasion, and notwithstanding the severe inclemency of the weather Reed's Opera House was literally jammed, many being unable to find seats. The members of the order were provided with badges in one of the rooms of the building and entered the hall in a body where seats had been reserved for them, and by their prominence in all classes of profession, business, trades and avocation, as well as in numbers surprised every one not familiar with the progress of the order. Hon. R. P. Earhart of Protection Lodge No. 2, acted as master of ceremonies, and together with the speaker of the evening and members of the reception committee occupied seats on the stage. The exercises were commenced with the opening ode, sung by the members of the order, Mrs. J. M. Patterson presiding at the piano. This was followed with an overture by the orchestra, consisting of the following well known musicians, Miss Nellie Hall, pianist; W. T. Gray, cornet; George B. Gray, 1st violin; Eugene Willis, 2d violin; Geo. H. Burnett flute, and Geo. S. Nickerson bass viol. The rendition was very fine and well merited the applause so generously bestowed. Hon. R. P. Earhart in a few well chosen remarks then welcomed the visitors and briefly reviewed the advancement of the order in the city, congratulating it on the number present and bespeaking for it the continued growth and prosperity that its aims and objects so justly merited. He closed his remarks by introducing Hon. John F. Caples, the orator of the evening, who delivered an eloquent address of forty-five minutes. It is needless to remark that the address gave universal satisfaction, the speaker being interrupted with frequent outbursts of applause, and at its close was the recipient of numerous well merited compliments. Miss Nettie Piper, of Albany, then favored the audience with a vocal solo, the piano accompaniment being played by Miss Laura Adams, of Salem. Miss Piper's effort fairly took the house by storm, as she possesses a voice of wonderful power and flexibility, which with culture has placed her among the foremost in the ranks of vocalists in this state. She was enthusiastically encored and responded with another choice selection, which was greeted with round after round of vociferous applause. This was followed by another selection by the orchestra, the closing ode by the order completing the programme at the Opera House.

The members of the order, with their families, then adjourned to the Chemeketa Hotel, where supper was provided. The viands were contributed by the ladies of the city whose husbands are workmen. Mr. Graves, proprietor of the hotel, for a merely nominal figure, gave the order the use of his parlors and dining room, and the employes of the house were assiduous and attentive to the wants of their visitors, they having set the tables and made all the necessary preparations for the reception of their guests. Over 300 people were provided with supper, the quantity and quality of which could not easily be excelled. Those present at the supper were loud in their praises of the management, the success of which was largely due to J. H. Babbitt, Esq., ably aided by H. W. Pallies and Hon. Jno. G. Wright, each of whom spared no labor to make the affair successful. Notwithstanding the number in attendance far more than the traditional twelve baskets full remained untouched. The thanks of the order are due to Wesley Graves, Esq., proprietor, and his army of employes for their services and for the attention and accommodations extended to the horde of hungry workmen who, on that evening, swarmed about the doors of the Chemeketa. The affair throughout proved a grand success, and cannot fail to have a beneficial influence on the A. O. U. W. of that city.

INTERIOR MERCHANTS' AGENCY.

Further Statement of its Workings with Reference to Country Dealers.

With 1881 Portland's commercial progress has made another move forward that is calculated to be of the greatest advantage to dealers in the interior, in the establishing of an Interior Merchants' Agency. These institutions can be found in every large commercial city in the United States, and have been found to work to the interest of its members by securing bargains both in buying goods and selling produce that no one firm can possibly secure; not only buying and selling to better advantage is secured, but the expense is greatly reduced in handling either the goods or produce. The agent in this city, J. R. Farrish, has had large experience in the business in San Francisco, where a large and successful business was carried on. This city probably more than anywhere else, offers a better field for an institution of this character, owing to Portland not having an exclusive commission house, for all speculate more or less by purchasing on their own account produce sent to them, and in doing so there is at times great temptation to make by such purchases. In buying goods for interior merchants the agency will have the advantage by being here and purchasing daily, and knowing who sell the cheapest; besides this, purchasing largely they can buy more cheaply. In selling wheat or other produce, being able to offer larger quantities they can at all times get more; besides export buyers prefer dealing with persons in the city to one in the country. The agency has correspondents at San Francisco, New York and Boston. These correspondents will keep the agency thoroughly advised of the values and the tendency of the market in wheat, flour, oats, wool and other country produce, so as to enable it to work to better advantage for its patrons. It is in correspondence with reliable firms in London and also Liverpool, to keep it well advised of the wheat and flour market in the respective places—all advices to be sent by telegraph. The correspondents are selected with the view of keeping the agency informed ahead of all others. Interior merchants, millmen, warehousemen and salmon canners should call at the agency and examine more thoroughly into its workings, and satisfy themselves that it is the best of schemes for the advantage of persons operating in the country.

Six persons were baptized in Dairy creek, near Hillsboro, on Sunday, the 23d of January.

S. Friedman, of Buena Vista, offers a reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who fired his place of business at that town on the 10th of last October.

A shoemaker's shop has been added to the Indian school at Forest Grove. The boys take hold of the work with avidity. Twelve of the Indian boys are working as apprentices at the blacksmith's trade.

An old man named [illegible], who lived with his brother in Benton county, a few miles from Albany, was found dead in his bed one morning last week. The cause of his death is supposed to be heart disease.

Eugene Journal: It would be a good idea for our city fathers to consider the matter of undertaking to keep the water out of town in case of a flood such as we had last week. There were only two places where the water came in from the mill race and $500 worth of work would effectually stop both places, and thus save to the city and our citizens over $1000 in rebuilding fences and sidewalks.

The funeral services of the late Rev. G. C. Chandler were conducted from the Baptist church, Forest Grove, on the 20th of January. Seven ministers were present. A brief but touching review of his life was given by Rev. Mr. Rose, of McMinnville. The music on the occasion was conducted by Miss Ellen Scott, and the favorite hymns of the deceased were rendered with pathetic touch and tone. The remains were interred in the beautiful cemetery on the hill. The following persons acted as pallbearers: [illegible] Henderson, John Sanders, T. D. Henderson, of Amity, Henry Warren, of McMinnville, Thos. Cox and M. McDonald, of Forest Grove.

Albany Democrat: Sometime last October or November a young man named George Anderson sold an order for $40 on Henry C. [illegible], of Corvallis, to James [illegible] of this city. A few days afterwards, it was found out that the order was forged, and a warrant for the arrest of Anderson was issued at once and placed in the hands of Constable Monteith. His whereabouts were not ascertained until last week, when he was found at Oregon City and brought up here by Monteith. He was examined last Thursday before Justice Hayes and bound over under $300 bonds, in default of which he went to jail. He acknowledges the crime, but says that he was under the influence of liquor when he committed it.

A dog belonging to C. B. Masters, of Roseburg, was found to be mad last Sunday morning, 23d inst., and was immediately shot. This is the first instance of hydrophobia that has ever been known in Douglas county.

A teachers institute has been called to meet in Roseburg Feb. 9th, 1881, and to continue its session three full days. The exercises will be varied and exceedingly profitable to the teachers and people who may be in attendance.

Riley Butcher was arrested at Canyonville last week on a bench warrant from Grant county by Deputy Sheriff Brockway, for being a defaulting witness in the case of the State of Oregon vs Murphy for killing Jas. Vickers, formerly of Canyonville. It seems that Butcher was unable to raise the means necessary to make the trip of about 450 miles, and consequently could not obey the summons of the court.

There has been some talk of a new court house for Jackson county, and it has been thought during the past year that some move towards building one might be made by next spring, but the heavy expenses of the criminal cases at the recent term of circuit court will be too heavy a drain upon the taxpayers to admit of their entertaining with much relish the proposition of a tax to build a new court house.

Ashland Tidings: Gentlemen from Lake county inform us that there is more trouble in that county this winter from stock pilfering and conflicting claims of stock owners than they ever knew before, and there is talk of an association of stock men to take measures to put an end to the annoyance. A heavy standing reward for the arrest and conviction of any one guilty of stealing stock or altering brands, is one of the means proposed.

The milk from three hundred cows will be manufactured into cheese the present year at the White river cheese factory.

After the first of February there will be three mails a week from Puyallup to Sumner, instead of semi-weekly, as heretofore.

E. H. Brown, clerk in the custom house at Port Townsend, was married on the 6th of January to Miss Ella Maddin of that place.

The overflow in White river has caused considerable damage to farmers along the river. The Adams farm especially has suffered from the inroads of the flood.

The farmers of Puyallup and White river will continue the experiment of raising the sugar beet. The fattening quality is found to be far ahead of any other root crop raised.

LaConner Mail: Judge Plaster of Ferndale, we are informed, is in receipt of a handsome legacy from his old home in Texas, and has invested part thereof in fast horses for the Nooksack country.

The most furious storm that has been known in that region for 25 years passed over Puyallup valley on the 25th of January. Much timber was prostrated, many houses were unroofed, a number of barns were blown down and some stock was killed.

The late wind storm up White river, along the telegraph line, was so violent that the "section man" out there says the trees for a time fell at the rate of five a minute. In some instances the trees were literally twisted off and carried thirty or forty feet.

At a meeting of the Olympia town board last week efficient measures were adopted to prevent the spreading of small pox. There are no new cases reported and no deaths from it. It remains confined to the one family where it was, several miles from town.

The church building on the Puyallup Indian reservation was dedicated on the 23d of January; it is a tasteful and commodious structure and would be an ornament to any rural neighborhood. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Dr. Lindsley; Rev. Mr. Armstrong, Governor Newell and Agent Milroy each talked in an interesting manner to the Indians, who were attentive and appreciative listeners.

Olympia Courier: The train on the Olympia-Tenino now makes two trips per day to Tenino and will continue to do so until further notice. This will be a matter of great convenience to the traveling public and particularly to many who come to Olympia to transact business at the land office. They can come up the sound to New Tacoma, stay there over night and get into Olympia, on the cars at 10½ A. M. This will give them all the rest of the day here.

Ledger: Lister & Co., of New Tacoma, are preparing to increase the capacity of their iron works at that place. They now have at work in their foundry and machine shops twenty men on full time, need six or eight additional moulders, and have orders from the railroad company for castings for 250 cars, which will amount in all to 300 tons. There are now in their yard 150 tons of Oswego pig iron, and 300 tons more ordered and on the way here. Also, 50 tons of Scotch pig iron, ordered from San Francisco. During the time they are at work on this contract of car castings, they will, judging from the past, do repair work for the company which will require about 150 tons of castings.

A violent wind storm visited Tacoma on the 25th of January, blowing steadily with increasing force for 24 hours. The shipping in the harbor was violently shaken and tumbled against the wharves. The damage was fortunately light. The storm fell, says the Ledger, with its greatest force in the neighborhood of the railroad shops, where it tore away the roof from the company's large woodshed. The greatest amount of damage done was by the action of the waves on the fill or embankment of the main track running parallel with switch No. 1. About 300 feet of the road-bed, including the small bridge, was so far washed as to let the track down on the outer side, and for the present render it useless, the trains reaching the wharf by the siding.

The survey of the Green river or Sheets pass of the Cascades mountains continues in spite of cold and storm. The party in the field is now in charge of Engineer Bogue. The engineer who preceded him mistook a small stream called Coal creek for Green river and cut a trail up it a distance of about twelve miles before discovering his mistake. This caused great delay and loss. About the 20th inst. the party were within 18 or 20 miles of the summit of the mountains, and had a good deal of work to do before reaching the snow line. Thus far they have cut about one mile a day. The trail is five feet wide. Where logs are small they are cut out entirely, but very large ones are notched down so pack animals can step over them. Similar work is in progress on the eastern side, and, if possible, both parties will finish their work before stopping.

For a short season only, balance of our Trimmed Hats for ladies, misses and children, at actual cost of material. Mooney & Valentine, First and Taylor streets.

The Boy Lincoln.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

Lincoln's early youth was spent in Spencer county, Indiana, above Rockport, a beautiful little city crowning the abrupt cliffs which frown over the Ohio river. He was faithful and industrious, but there was in him a latent indolence which made him fond of taking his rod to fish, or with his gun upon his shoulder, he would roam in search of game over the long, low hills bursting with red day. There are living at present several old citizens who knew Lincoln well at that time. He was thoughtful, and his solitary expeditions probably gave him plenty of opportunity to indulge his meditative faculties. The description of his appearance then; his long, lank legs under an awkward body; his homely face upon which the prominent nose stood like a handle; his long hair dangling upon his shoulders, bring up instantly the picture of Ichabod Crane in the twilight stealing over the hills of Sleepy Hollow to pay his court to Fraulein Katrina Von Tassel.

The embryo statesman was full of spirit and fond of mad pranks. One old gentleman in Rockport lives to tell of the last time he saw Lincoln. He was visiting the Lincoln homestead, and as he was coming away they found a trespassing cow hanging about the gate. The cow had given the Lincolns much annoyance by entering their garden and committing depredations. Young Abe was dressed in a suit of jeans, without any coat, as it was summer time, and on his head he wore a broad-brimmed white straw hat, part of which was cracked and broken. Finding the cow standing hypocritically meek at the gate, young Abe leaped astride of her back, and, digging his bare heels into her sides, the astonished animal broke away down the road in a lumbering gallop. "The last I saw of Abe Lincoln," the old gentleman relates fondly, "he was swinging his hat, shouting at the top of his voice, galloping down the road on that thunderstruck cow." In the old country church near the Lincoln place is a pulpit which was made by Abe Lincoln and his father. There is a book case in the Evansville custom house made by the same carpenters and taken there for preservation. Near where the old house stood is a dilapidated corn-crib with rail floor, the rails for which were split by young Lincoln. Last fall a monument was raised over Nancy Lincoln's grave through the efforts of Gen. Veatch of Rockport. It is a plain slab with a plain inscription.

Who Apologized?

[From the Cincinnati Gazette.]

Conkling sent the following telegram:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 13, 1881.

To the Hon. Thomas C. Platt: I congratulate the the republican party and the state of New York on the choice of a senator who never apologized for being a stalwart republican.

ROSCOE CONKLING.

Who did apologize for being a stalwart republican, and what is a stalwart? There were several other candidates, who were supposed to be Conkling's friends. Did any of them apologize? In fact, it is understood that he had a preference, although he thought it inexpedient to show it, and that his preference was not chosen. Who is meant to be hit by this delphic telegram?

Mlle. Sara Bernhardt's original engagement of one hundred nights has been extended, in consequence of her great success, and she will continue to play here until the end of April.

An Arabian Night's Tale

[London Telegraph December 28.]

A correspondent forwards the following illustration of superstition amongst the Chinese with reference to a very ancient and widespread belief that the fox has the power of assuming the human form to lead mortals to their destruction The same powers are also ascribed to the badger by the Japanese In this case the story is given as a true one and the facts are stated to be well known to every one living in the Great Street outside the Chien Men (Front Gate) at Pekin where the affair is supposed to have occurred

A certain Ningpo man kept a druggist's shop at Pekin Having made a good deal of money by it he determined to commence a wholesale business as well as the retail one He therefore bought a warehouse for storing drugs, and put it in charge of a nephew His venture proved eminently successful, and he grew richer daily principally for the extraordinary reason that the drugs stored in the warehouse were less liable to get damp or mouldy than anybody else's As the nephew was at work in the warehouse, he used constantly to notice the prettiest girl he had ever seen passing by the door Though he sorely longed to try to make acquaintance with her he was restrained by her modest and retiring demeanor Time went by and one day an old gentleman with a long beard, and leaning on a staff called at the uncle's shop In the course of conversation it appeared that he came from the borders of Suchuen and Kansu, and had originally fled to Pekin to escape from the Mahomedan disturbances in the West. Finally he said that he had often remarked the nephew at work in the warehouse and had been struck by his steadiness and diligence and he would like to marry his only daughter to him He had sufficient money to make liberal arrangements with regard to the wedding trousseau and presents and would not quarrel about terms. The young man, being so far from his home at Ningpo was not betrothed to any one His uncle therefore gladly accepted the proposal As both parties were strangers in Pekin, everything was settled and the marriage ceremony performed without any unnecessary fuss or formality When the time came for the bride to unveil, the bridegroom, who had never yet seen her, was most anxious to know what she was like. At the first glance what was his joy to discover that she was the girl he used to see walking past the warehouse The marriage was a happy one He was the fondest of husband and she the most loving and dutiful of wives. Before long the young man's father in Ningpo, wishing to see his new daughter-in-law wrote and told his son to bring her home on a visit The son accordingly made preparations to start off as soon as possible For the last day or two before his departure, the uncle, who had not been home for many years, was constantly coming to his house as he had a thousand things to talk about—reminiscences to recall, messages to be delivered and the like When the moment for them to commence the journey actually arrived, the uncle went across for the last time to say good-by, but to his astonishment neither nephew nor niece was to be found After a fruitless search he went to the house of the girl's father to see if he could learn anything there. But there was no house standing, merely two or three wretched little rooms in ruins, without doors or windows He made inquiries among the neighbors, but none of them knew anything of the old man or the house. Everything was then plain The old man and his daughter were foxes and had made away with the young husband But stranger than anything else was the fact that from that day forth the drugs stored in the warehouse became just as subject to mould as those kept anywhere else "

The New Dutch Republic.

The London Spectator, which a few weeks ago was indignant that America did not concern herself more with foreign affairs would apparently be very glad if England were out of her scrape in south Africa, where there is a new struggle of Dutch republics for freedom England is at war with a native tribe of the Basutos, which the Spectator admits was "provoked by unwise (British) legislation," but in order to reach the Basutos her troops must cross the Transvaal country, whose inhabitants have taken this occasion to throw off their submission to the queen This is the Spectator's apology for aggression "To abandon Basutoland or the Transvaal is to recede from an enterprise, the civilization of south Africa, which is of high moment to the world, and might end in the subjugation of both Boers and Basutos by some new Zulu king" Besides, the fact that they have started on a policy, although it is unwise and unjust, compels England to carry it through—a situation which the Spectator regards as a "dilemma," "a disgusting necessity," and an occasion for "indignant regret."

The fighting weight of the Boers of the Transvaal, is supposed to be about 10,000 men of the best soldier material—hardy colonists fighting for independence But as already appears in the words of Patrick Henry, "their cause will raise us allies." Old Holland, when the Dutch republics flourished and struggled with Spanish despotism, is alive with sympathy and appeals to English liberal sentiment in their behalf. All the old Dutch influences around the cape of Good Hope are deeply sympathetic with the Boers, and in the Orange Free State England can subjugate that little people, but she is likely to alienate in so doing the loyalty of a large portion of her South African empire.

Like the American colonists at the revolution, the Boers are slave holders, but it is not in the immediate interests of emancipation that English aggression moves on A distant parliament on the Thames would probably abolish slavery sooner than the colonists on the Vaal by their own motives, but on this ground alone to deny the Boers independence would be to assume a responsibility which might never be vindicated

New Regime at West Point.

An Eastern correspondent commenting upon the recent change in administration at West Point says

Gen Howard proposes to try to introduce gentlemanly manners among the cadets at West Point, by having the Professors treat them socially as gentlemen instead of holding the same distinction between themselves and the cadets as in the army is held between officers and common soldiers This seems proper in itself and most people will be surprised that this is an innovation This establishment of social relations between Professors and cadets will also enable the Professors to counteract by their example the practice of ostracism by the cadets The exercise of this "Boycotting" of some colored cadets which has recently made it notorious is only an example of its practice in all former times in ostracism for holding certain political opinions In the good old Democratic times a cadet would be as completely ostracised for having anti slavery opinions—in other words for not being a Democrat—as Whittaker was for having a sixth part of African blood As the present Professors were all trained by that regime and as tradition becomes hereditary in such an institution the probability is that the same notions still dominate the cadet social code Gen Howard when a cadet had experience of this ostracism, having suffered it for his anti slavery opinions and also for recognizing socially his guardian's son then a sergeant in the corps of sappers and miners There are other officers of the army who before the war and while in the Academy had anti slavery s[illegible] who will be glad to see a radical change in the Academy by which this unreasonable tyranny shall be suppressed

George Eliot

New York c[illegible]

Sun I write [illegible]
[illegible]

The papers seem to be somewhat bewildered as to the causes which led to the marriage of George Eliot to John W Cross, a year and a half after the death of Mr Lewes Cross was a New York broker for many years a member of the leading firm of Dennistoun Wood & Co When he returned to England about 1870 he drifted into the literary set of which George Eliot and her husband were brilliant members and after a time became their banker literary agent and manager He was on the most intimate terms with them both He was prudent and clear headed—just supplementing their own talent by supplying the financial ability they lacked and when Lewes died George Eliot found herself leaning upon him for advice He was twenty years her junior and the marriage seems to have been entirely prompted by considerations of mutual convenience.

I met yesterday a lady who knew George Eliot and Lewes—Mrs E J Bruntz Rees, an English lady now living in New York

"It was a good many years ago," she said "They came to our neighborhood at Wandsworth in the suburbs of London, and took a small detached villa with a garden of half an acre around it George Eliot thought much of this garden and I remember seeing her often there They were both very unattractive people to look upon and they used to wander about the neighborhood the biggest pair of frights that ever was followed by a shaggy little dog who could do tricks Their villa was the center of the literary coterie of English liberals—like Frederick Harrison Miss Martineau and such—and it was the rendezvous of scientists like Huxley and Herbert Spencer—all the so-called broad thinkers of the realm I was at the house several times She had a sort of double parlors, communicating rooms where she mostly received guests Here Emerson visited her at that time I remember well how she looked. She had a dull sort of brown hair which she combed smoothly straight down over her forehead, temples and ears about as unbecoming as could be

"Did you know of her father?

"Oh, yes, he was not a clergyman of the establishment, as most of your papers seem to think, and if he ever preached at all it was in a way that gave him no prominence or position He was the steward of the Newdegate estates The one American paper that states this fact infers that it was a very obscure position, and that Marian Evans must have been rescued from the depths of pauperism The reverse is the case The steward of a large English estate is by no means a poor man, he is well off, and is able to educate his daughter as young Marian was educated It was so good a place that Mr Evans was glad to bequeath it to his son George Eliott's brother, who still holds it"

"How was George Eliot regarded socially?"

"She was looked at askance and did not have much of a social place She and George Lewes lived faithfully and happily together for twenty years, she was introduced everywhere as his wife and signed her letters 'M E Lewes' and all England knew that they would have been married if the court which divorced him from his inconstant wife had not prohibited it but after all, they lived in defiance of that figment of the law and when Lewes died and she signed herself as the executor of his will 'Marian Evans, spinster' it was a little too much for them However it was a bad court decision which compelled her thus to sign herself and the public would probably not have liked it a particle better if she had administered the estate as Mrs. George H Lewes"

The Cotton King of America.

[From the Louisville Courier Journal]

Mr. Richardson of Oresson, Miss is the largest cotton planter in the world, and is the cotton king of America He has worked hard all his life and is still working He is popular with the masses, and especially so with his colored laborers He is generally believed to have accumulated from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, all made in the south, the poor south. Eight hundred hands are employed in the factories, three fourths of whom are women, gathered from the surrounding country, good, faithful, industrious and intelligent The remaining fourth are men and boys, gathered from various places a few from the north and a few from England and Scotland, who work 400 looms and 18,000 spindles. In cotton these mills consume daily from 18 to 20 bales, besides an enormous quantity of wool, obtained mostly from the Florida parishes of Louisiana on Lake Pontchartrain The prices of the products of these mills are kept down to rock bottom and these mills being situated in the southern cotton belt and in the wool producing districts, and no freights to pay on cotton their facilities for buying the raw material are without doubt unsurpassed, and they can thus undersell all others Their savings in freight, having to pay none at all, amount to $7 or $8 per bale Those goods find a ready sale in all the large cities The mills are now running day and night using the Brush electric light making the buildings as bright as day The night hands are separate and distinct from those that work in the day All hands work harmoniously together There has never been a strike nor any threats of such a thing There is no colored labor employed except five men as firemen Oresson is a very thriving town orderly and temperate There is not a grog shop in the place

The ex Presidents have died off more rapidly than their wives There are still living Mrs Polk of Tennessee Mrs Fillmore of Buffalo, Mrs. Tyler at the Louise Home Washington and Mrs Lincoln, recently returned from Europe
